Via Venture Partners sell Procom to multinational Amphenol Corp.

Via Venture Partners and the management have sold Procom A/S, a leading international supplier of state-of-the-art antennas and related RF equipment, to US-listed Amphenol Corporation, one of the largest manufacturers of interconnect and antenna products in the world, with annual revenues of more than USD 5 billion.

Procom has a broad pan-European customer base and a strong position in a broad array of industrial RF markets, including marine, defense, public safety, transportation and other segments. The company was established in 1980 and was owned by its founders until 2008, when the current CEO Peter Borregaard became co-owner. Having followed the company for several years, Via Venture Partners invested in Procom in 2013.

Procom CEO, Peter Borregaard: "It has been a pleasure to work with Via Venture Partners and the very experienced team. We had the right mutual chemistry and together we have achieved a lot."

Via Venture Partners: A very good investment

"With a very good return and an impressive IRR, Procom has been a relatively short-lived but very successful investment for Via Venture Partners and I am convinced that at this stage, Amphenol is the right owner for the continued global growth of Procom, for Procom's customers and employees. The combination of the Procom management team's deep and excellent knowhow of the industrial segment and Via Venture Partners' business development experience has been an ideal value creation cocktail", says Jakob Rybak-Andersen, partner at Via Venture Partners.

Amphenol: Accelerate our expansion into the important PMR market

"I am extremely excited to bring Procom's many years of entrepreneurial success along with their strong background in technical product development and engineering into Amphenol. Peter Borregaard's background and experience, combined with the global scope and reach of the Amphenol organization, will help to drive the continued expansion of the company as part of the Amphenol family," says Zak Raley, Senior Vice President at Amphenol.
